Carhartt Donates Clothing to Crossroads Clients

Detroit, Mich- Crossroads of Michigan received a generous donation of clothing samples from Carhartt, a manufacturer of premium work wear. Crossroads, a nonprofit social service outreach agency, will hand out twenty boxes of pants, shirts and an assortment of other items for clients to take home.

Headquartered in Dearborn, Carhartt has been a Michigan based company for over 100 years. Recognizing the huge need in Detroit, Carhartt wanted to help the poor and homeless in the city. "Clothing, especially mens clothing, is always in high demand for our clients. The winter months are hard and durable, comfortable clothing can mean the world to those individuals without homes or heat for their homes," said Mary Honsel, Executive Director of Crossroads.

Crossroads offers counseling, advocacy, and emergency assistance to people in need. Crossroads has been serving the community for 40 years with two social service units, a Sunday Soup Kitchen, and a no fee employment office.
